Chancellor, SEGi University

Dear Graduands,

Heartiest congratulations to all graduands for achieving your graduation milestone. It is truly commendable that despite the COVID-19 pandemic, you have worked very hard to reach this unique graduation, SEGi University's first ever Virtual Graduation Ceremony.

Here at SEGi, we strive to offer the latest and the most relevant industry related knowledge and skills whilst practising continuous quality improvement in our courses to meet industry changes. The COVID-19 pandemic is a clear example of a real-life challenge that SEGi has been striving to prepare all our students for. In adapting to the 'New Normal', the use of technologies and the digitalisation of our daily task by using online platforms have become a lifestyle, from conducting business meetings to the use of blended approach in the delivery of programmes.

SEGi has put in place initiatives to solidifying graduates' future in a tech-economy environment, even before the outbreak of the pandemic. SEGi's "Towards Industrial Revolution 4.0" was launched by Malaysia's former premier, Tun Dr Mahathir Mohamad back in 2019, where we work towards redesigning certain aspects of our curricula, upgrading our features and facilities, and strengthening industry linkages to equip tomorrow's graduates with the 21st-century learning skills and industry-relevant knowledge and competencies.

I believe that in your journey with us, SEGi has equipped you with strong fundamentals to help build your dreams. Work hard, have fun, but be acutely aware of the inevitable and perpetual changes in the world so that you can continuously seek new opportunities presented by those complexities. Have an open heart and mind to welcome new possibilities.

Congratulations again and best wishes as you spread your wings to take on the world.

Thank you.

Professor Graham Baldwin

Vice-Chancellor,

University of Central Lancashire (UCLAN)

To Executive Director Hew, distinguished guests, Graduands, staff, ladies and gentlemen: the very warmest of greetings from the University of Central Lancashire to today's annual awards ceremony for those students who have studied UCLan programmes at SEGi University.

I'm Professor Graham Baldwin, the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Central Lancashire and ideally, I would be with you in person along with my colleagues, to congratulate and applaud SEGi Graduands for your hard-earned achievements.

Alas, in this difficult age of COVID-19, I'm talking to you from my office in Preston, Lancashire. Looking forwards however, I am eager to visit SEGi as soon as possible, and to join you in person at a future Graduation Ceremony. The outlook for international travel is becoming progressively brighter, as vaccination programmes begin to be implemented worldwide. Let's hope we can be together in the not too distant future.

I know, both from my UCLan colleagues and from your University's reputation, that SEGi graduates are hugely impressive, having shown discipline, devotion and enthusiasm towards their studies. I have no doubt that today's Graduands will follow the impressive lead of those graduates before them.

Furthermore, considering the significant challenges presented by the coronavirus pandemic, your achievements are all the more impressive, as you have had to overcome obstacles and address challenges not faced in a generation.

I have seen first-hand how different and difficult university life has been, but also how capably and confidently institutions like yours and mine have responded.

Nobody has been more resilient than our students and therefore it is most appropriate, even more so than usual in fact, that we recognise their extraordinary achievements.

I also want to thank the staff of both institutions for their dedication towards the academic attainment of those graduating today, alongside their support towards maintaining what is a wonderfully positive relationship between our universities. We at the University of Central Lancashire are proud of our close partnership with SEGi - I look forward to working with Executive Director Hew and her colleagues to further develop our partnership in the years ahead.

Another very important group who I am confident will have contributed towards your successes and who I want to thank are your families, friends, supporters and loved ones, many of whom I hope are able to celebrate with you today.

Finally, to the Graduands I want to say that I hope you will continue your connection with us by joining the UCLan Alumni Association where you can keep in touch with your fellow graduates and keep the University up to date about your career progression. We would be delighted to hear from you.

So, enjoy the day and congratulations again from myself and everybody at the University of Central Lancashire.

Thank you, and I hope to see you soon.
